

Congratulations – 30 years in partnership

Bryan Harper, Titus Wilson Ltd

We at Titus Wilson Ltd (previously Dixon Printing) in Kendal have been there from the start. For most of the last 30 years the Journal was typeset by Shaun Drummond who now works for the NHS at RLI. I myself have been involved in its production for the last 18 years and taking over the typesetting and design in the autumn of 2015.

At the start, all copy was supplied on paper, from a typewriter or handwritten. With the introduction of computers the role of the typesetter became a major part of the process. Over the years with the development of personal information technology and printing techniques, things have changed by all recognition in the design and production of the Journal although the content is generally the same. We can now use colour throughout and all volumes are now posted online.

It has been a pleasure working with Shadaba Ahmed, all the past editors and assistants, we look forward to many more years of working together.
